Political Structure in Underdeveloped Areas, Change Under Cuidance, Change and Political haditations, Social Mobility in Underdeveloped Areas, and Geographic and Cultural Mobility in Underdeveloped Areas.

The tener of the course is to better fit the middle-career officer to meet the increased and more complex responsibilities which he will encounter in his future assignments. It is given twice a year and the number of mambers entering each session has averaged just over twenty. High esseions have been conducted with 165 persons graduated and new assigned overseas. The program is currently under re-evaluation to determine whether it should be continued or comparable training supplied through other sources; and should it be continued, how to re-orient certain of its phases to provide more direct emphasis on comparable training.

3) African Area Studies Program Boston University (MSAM 131/1s)

This course has been designed for professional-grade personnel going to Africa. The sim of the program has been to provide an understanding of the social, political, and economic englument of Africa and the inter-relationships of the different fields of U.S. endeavor in that continued. The course has been given for the past three years approximately feer times a year and has graduated 123 personnel. This course is under study to decide whether or agt or in what form it should be continued. An African accurac in whatever form will include appropriate emphasis on counter-insurgency training.

4) Senior Officers Training

A. I. D. is participating in the development of the national medernization and counter-invergency school. It has also assisted in the development of the current inter-against five-week course on the Problems of Development and internal Delense. A. I. D. has nominated personnel to the faculty and twelve officers to attend the initial neuron. The majority of these are senior efficers awaiting field analysments to areas where there is already a threat of incompany. It is anticipated that all senior officers going to the field will receive this bourse; and is the case of newly incoming people, this will be in addition to or phased with the continuing sixwest driestation course gives to all A. I. D. personnel.

A.I.D. is restaffing a large number of scalar positions overcone. We are currently engaged in determining the numbers and positions of afficers who should receive training in counter-insurgency, and in the same content the adequacy of existing Agency training in this field.

Once criteria has been determined for providing training at appropriate degree, a pinning system is to be inaugurated to meet these training meets without at the same time depriving the missions in critical areas of their key personnel and direction. Rearry all of the major A.I.D. training programs are in a terminal singe and set to be replaced or reviewed. In whatever substantive continued form, counter-insurgency training a fill be appropriately emphasized. Present terminating dates are being extended to devoted with determination of "critical" areas, selection of efficer positions for training, agreement on the level and emphasized of training, and systematizing of the phasing process.

A.I.D. will be able to expend the use of its own training facilities and of these effects by other W.S. Government agencies. Process and of these effects by other W.S. Government agencies. Process and within the Agency are not such that a personnal resistional or initial training cycle can yet be provided all officers who require it. This, however, is the Agency goal. Programs will be reported as appropriate.

The six-week course is given to all personnel and the Agency believes the program meets the broad background needs for overseas assignment at all levels. 279 persons have already gone through the course. Approximately 700 will go through each year. A. I. D. intends to coordinate with FSI to determine where the program can be drawn in more direct counter-insurgency terms.

2) The Institute for International Development School of Advanced International Studies
The Johns Hopkins University
(NSAM 131/1b)

This is a twenty-one week course given to middle-grade personnel from overseas missions or in prospect of going overseas. In general terms the course relates the work of the assistance program to U.S. foreign policy objectives, provides an understanding of the contribution the various activity sectors make toward economic development, and emphasizes the effect on economic development of social, cultural, and political conditions. Included among the course titles are: Marxism, Economic Development, Soviet Economic Assistance, Political Ideologies, Use of Military in Economic Development, Imperialism, The Endoof Empires, Nationalism, Ethnocentrism, Colonialism, Non-Economic Factors in Economic Development,

Political Structure in Underdeveloped Areas, Change Under Guidance, Change and Political Institutions, Social Mobility in Underdeveloped Areas, and Geographic and Cultural Mobility in Underdeveloped Areas.

The tenor of the course is to better fit the middle-career officer to meet the increased and more complex responsibilities which he will encounter in his future assignments. It is given twice a year and the number of members entering each session has averaged just over twenty. Eight sessions have been conducted with 165 persons graduated and now assigned overseas. The program is currently under re-evaluation to determine whether it should be continued or comparable training supplied through other sources; and should it be continued, how to re-orient certain of its phases to provide more direct emphasis on counter-insurgency training.

3) African Area Studies Program Boston University (NSAM 131/1a)

This course has been designed for professional-grade personnel going to Africa. The aim of the program has been to provide an understanding of the social, political, and economic environment of Africa and the inter-relationships of the different fields of U.S. endeavor in that continent. The course has been given for the past three years approximately four times a year and has graduated 132 personnel. This course is under study to decide whether or not or in what form it should be continued. An African course in whatever form will include appropriate emphasis on counter-insurgency training.

4) Senior Officers Training (NSAM 131/1c)

A.I.D. is participating in the development of the national modernization and counter-insurgency school. It has also assisted in the development of the current inter-agency five-week course on the Problems of Development and Internal Defense. A.I.D. has nominated personnel to the faculty and twelve officers to attend the initial course. 5) Program For Training Public Safety Advisors
International Association of Chiefs of Police
(NSAM 131/1b)

Under contract with A. I. D. the International Association of Chiefs of Police has provided training for Public Safety Advisors on assignment to go overseas. This training has included courses in: Program Planning and Public Safety Operations, Role of the Public Safety Technical Advisor, Leadership, Public Safety Participant Training, Comparative Study of Police Systems, and Police and Judicial Systems of the Host Country. The course, although of only two weeks duration, supplements the regular six-week orientation course given to all incoming personnel. In the nature of their work the Public Safety Advisors clearly are actively concerned with counter-insurgency criteria in countries where this threat exists. The limitations imposed by the existing training facility have not made it possible to re-orient the course itself and Public Safety personnel have received their major agency training in the general six-week orientation course. However, the present contract with the International Association of Police Chiefs will not be continued in its present form. Either the training facility will be entirely replaced or counter-insurgency training needs will be properly met within the existing source.

6) Other Pertinent Training (NSAM 131/1b and lc)

A. I. D. has taken advantage of special training facilities provided by other U.S. Government agencies. These include the Mid-Career Officers Course and the Communist Strategy Course at FSI to which A. I. D. has regularly sent personnel and which now may be put to more use in meeting Agency counter-insurgency training needs. Two officers just completed the counter-insurgency program planning course given by the Central Intelligence Agency and one officer is assigned to the CI course at the National War College. Selected courses in Communist Development and Economic Development are carried out by the Agency through contact with the Universities of California and Pittsburgh respectively. In addition, A. I. D. is providing lectures at the U.S. Army War College, the National War College, C. I. A. and the Foreign Service Institute.
